“I love to refer to ELAC students as beginners, they are beginning their journey toward their lifelong dreams and careers, their interest and goals are very high and it is my responsibility not only to instruct and teach, but give these students life learning lessons on how to be successful in life and how to make the correct choices. My most gratifying experience is to see students succeed, like a young man who was unsure about taking my class, stayed and ended up earning an ‘A’. Six months later, I met him at the Los Angeles Police Academy as he was about to graduate. I ran into him again at an in-service LAPD training session and found he was an instructor at the academy teaching Emergency Response tactics. He has spoken to my students about the importance of following your dream and making it come true.”

Mel Stevenson has over 30 years with the LAPD, working in a variety of assignments ranging from community relations and training to undercover vice officer. He is assigned to Air Support Division as a Senior Sergeant Watch Commander and supervisor as well as actively working as a supervisor helicopter pilot. He shares his wealth of experience and knowledge with students in his classes—illustrating his lectures with real-life situations.
The Educational Center located in the city of South Gate is a part of East Los Angeles College. Administration and coordination of the Center is the responsibility of the Office of Academic Affairs of East Los Angeles College.
